SPENDS $10,000 ON HER COWNS

Thousands Laid Aside for Horse Show Week by Daughter of the Banker, Whose Home Is in Riverdale.

MISS MOROSINI IS PLAYING STAR PART.

All of the Dresses Come from Paris, and No Single One Will Cost Less Than $1,000, Announcement Is Made.

Ten thousand dollars is a goodly sum for one young woman to spend on gowns designed expressly to be worn during the Horse Show week, yet this is just what Miss Giulia P. Morosini. daughter of Giovanni P. Morosini, the well-known financier, has done.

For the last two or three seasons the gowns worn at this annual function have been somewhat plainer than in for-mer years, but if Miss Morosini's order is a forerunner of the style of costum-ing to be expected this year, then the glories of the Horse Show will indeed have returned.

Early in July Miss Morosini commisstoned the Simpson Crawford Company to have their foreign buyer order for her from exclusive designs in Paris five of the handsomest costumes ever brought to this country.

True, the Horse Show was four months off, but with commendable foresight Miss Morosini bethought herself that hand made, embroidered costumes are not manufactured in a day, also that five gowns were required-a different one for every night in the week, not counting Saturday, when society people carefully absent themselves from the

But the time allowed did not prove any too long; for the event which marks the beginning of the social season is but ten days off and the coswere delivered to Miss Morosini at her home in Riverdale-on-the Hudson just this morning.

The bodice is also trimmed with a heavy gold embroidery in a sort of yoke harness effect. The sleeves consist merely of caps at the shoulders with full gathers of flowing lace to the elbows. The fifth gown is a beautifully harmonized costume of shaded violet Venetian lace. Tints from the palest lilic to the deepest purple are combined in a pansy design, embroidered with chendile and silver. The transparent yoke is of duchess lace embroidered with the purple chentile and silver.

This lace gown is made over drop skirts of chiffon and silk.

An important item in Miss Morosini's wardrobe is that every detail of her tollet corresponds with the color scheme of the gown. Hats, wraps, gloves, shoes and even jewels are all chosen to accompany each costume.

Not one of these gowns cost less than il,000—some of them two and three times as much. When all the accessories are included and the custom-house charges allowed for $10,000 will scarcely cover the cost of these five costumes for Horse Show week.

Mrs. Gruner Charges Her Husband and Stepson with Assault.

Mrs. Catherine Gruner, of De Kalb exenue, Concord, S. The woman told the Magistrate that The woman told the Magistrate that recently she had considerable domestic trouble caused by the frequent conflicts between her fifteen-year-old son, George, and her husband son, Paul. Last night she said her husband and stepson attacked her. While her husband beat her with a club the boy scratched her face, finally seizing a large earring she wore and tearing it from her ear so that the entire lobe of the ear was torn away. Magistrate Croak issued warrants for the father and son.
